NEW! Art Lecture: Art with a Message

Explore how artists throughout history have used visual imagery to raise attention for political and cultural issues. Picasso's Guernica was his first politically-charged painting. The painting was created in response to the bombing of Guernica (a Basque Country village in Spain) by German and Italian warplanes during the Spanish Civil War. Dada was an art movement born out of negative reaction to the horrors of World War I. There are many examples of using visual art as a means of protest. (A few included the following. The Guerilla Girls are an anonymous group of feminist, female artists devoted to fighting sexism and racism within the art world. Object Orange is an artistic project in Detroit, Michigan which seeks to draw attention to dilapidated buildings by painting them orange.) NEW! The Estrogen Effect: Women in Art History

Explore famous female artists and their contributions to the direction of art history. Louise Élisabeth Vigée Le Brun was a French painter, and is recognized as the most important female painter of the 18th century. Berthe Morisot was described as one of les trois grandes dames of Impressionism alongside Marie Bracquemond and Mary Cassatt. Female artists have been involved in making art in most times and places. Many art forms dominated by women have been historically dismissed as craft, instead of being considered fine art. Frida Kahlo contracted polio at age six. Dale Chihuly was blinded in one eye and had to re-learn his glass-making art. Henri de Toulouse-Lautrec suffered from congenital health conditions.)
